

We claim:

1. An interface system, comprising:

a plurality of software applications; means for entering text; and

a natural language search engine configured to receive an abbreviated textual command from the text entering means, match the abbreviated textual command with a desired application command, and launch one of the software applications by executing the desired application command.